CHIEF FRASER COMPARES POLICE WITH L. A. FORCE COST AND EFFICIENCY

Glendale Has 0.7 Policemen of All Grades Per 1000 Population, Compared With 1.3 in Larger City With Greater Expenditure; Is Self Supporting

THE OPERATING COST IS ABOUT ONE HALF

Burglaries Per 1000 of Population Represented by 9.1 Against 4.1 in This City, Because of "Team Work Co-operation," It Is Said

Figures prepared by the Glendale police department show, according to Police Chief Fraser, that for the money expended, Glendale is policed much more efficiently than is her sister city, Los Angeles.

For comparisons the local department takes the figures of the Los Angeles and Glendale police.

The report issued by the Glendale police department is as follows:

"The apportionment of police on a basis of tax revenue is far from being equitable, if we are to judge from the apportionment now in effect in the city of Los Angeles. For example: The University division has a population of approximately 315,000 and is policed on a basis of one patrolman for each 3000 persons, while the more select Wilshire division with a population of 108,000, is allotted one patrolman for each 1000 persons. In the matter of numerical strength, the city of Glendale is in a much better position than some sections of Los Angeles as can be seen from the following table:

A model troop meeting will be put on by the scouts of Glendale Troop 2, under the leadership of Scoutmaster Benjamin Robinson and Assistant Scoutmaster H. B. Robinson. "How to Signal," will be told by Major C. L. Wyman, formerly division signal officer and Lieut. Col. signal corps, U. S. army.

Following Major Wyman's talk, Eagle Scout Dallas Kalbaugh will play several selections on the xylophone. As usual there will be a period of roundtable discussions of subjects that are vitally interesting to the scout leader in the management of his troop. The last period of the meeting will consist of lots of eats and the spirit of good fellowship which is never lacking at the roundtable sessions.

GLENDALE DETECTIVES FIND CROOK

On Telegraphic Warrant From New Mexico, Make Arrest

SECURE CONFESSION

Some of the Goods Stolen From Store Is Recovered in Los Angeles

W. Chappell, who for the past few days has been living at 1213 East Colorado, and Wayne Robertson, of 1332 South Flower street, Los Angeles, were picked up by Detectives Royle and Simmons of the Glendale police force, Saturday. The two are charged with robbing a clothing and men's furnishings store in New Mexico, a short time ago. The men are now located in the Glendale jail.

Friday afternoon the Glendale police received a "wire" from Sheriff Ernest Stimpson of Tucuman, New Mexico, which stated that Chappell and Robertson had robbed a store at that place, and it was thought they were headed for Glendale. There was nothing in the way of a description of the men given in the telegram.

Detectives Royle and Simmons started working on the case at once, Saturday morning they located Chappell, who, after a thorough grilling, confessed, according to the police, and in this confession he gave the address of Robertson in Los Angeles.

Royle and Simmons went to the address in Los Angeles and found Robertson, also securing some of the clothing stolen. Robertson at first denied his connection with the crime, but when the men were brought face to face he broke down completely and told all of the details of the job.

The $25 reward, that goes to the man or men effecting the capture of these fellows will be turned over by the Glendale officers to the Glendale Police and Firemen's Benefit Fund.

A. R. EASTMAN ENDS SURVEY OF THE EAST

Returns From the Middle West With Renewed Pride in Glendale

MANY INTERESTED

Kansas City Rotarians Prove They Know About Jewel City

A. R. Eastman, president of the Glendale State Bank, returned home Saturday from two weeks' trip to Kansas City, Missouri, where he was called on account of the serious illness of his father. He purchased his ticket in Glendale through, via Southern Pacific-El Paso and the Rock Island railways.

His father is still a very sick man, but out of danger of passing away.

Mr. Eastman reports that he experienced nothing but sunshine on his trip, both going and coming. No rain or snow; the ground dry and wheat needing rain badly. Weather on the whole very similar to California. Very light travel east, but heavy travel west.

Reports gathered in conversation with farmers, bankers and business men in and around Kansas City are to the effect that a great many are figuring on coming to Southern California, and all of them said they wished they could live out there. Two vice-presidents of prominent Kansas City banks told him they were completely sold on Southern California and were coming soon to stay.

While in Kansas City he attended a meeting of the executive committee of the Rotary Club, at the Baltimore Hotel (about fifty in number), to discuss civic questions confronting the city. Mr. Eastman was introduced to the club by the president, as a former Kansas City man and now of Glendale, California. He says that immediately four men were on their feet at the same time plying him with questions. All four knew and inquired about eGeorge Karr, a fellow member of Rotary. Several fellows came to his "defense." One told of Glendale as the fastest growing city in the United States; another said that it was the home of Dr. Henry W. Harrower's Laboratory and that he had been using his gland pills for a number of years. Another told of the Adventist Sanitarium out there. In fact, Glendale was certainly well known to most of all of them.

Mr. Eastman is glad to get back home and says that Southern California and especially Glendale looks mighty good to him, after looking over the old towns, that are bigger, better than they were twenty years ago.

Mr. Eastman has every reason to be glad and feel proud of the wonderful showing his bank has made in one year and three months, having a total resource of $970,000.00, at close of business December 30, 1922.

BONUS LINE CONFERENCE IS ON TODAY

Representatives of Association Meet Superintendent Hatch

TO START ACTION

Manufacturers Will Require Four Months to Supply Equipment

A conference is to be held today between members of the railroad committee of the Glendale Advancement Association and three representatives of the Glendale-Montrose company, Superintendent Hatch, Vice-President Barton, and Secretary Harenape, to talk over the bonus line situation.

Superintendent Hatch of the Glendale-Montrose railroad, states that just as soon as he and the railroad officials are notified that the promised $25,000 bonus has been collected and is in escrow, a start will be made on the actual work of electrifying the line which is to connect with yellow car line.

It will then be five months before cars will be running. The situation has changed since last year, he says, when manufacturers promised the needed machinery for delivery in three months. They will not undertake to provide it under four months now, and an additional month will be consumed in installing it. Meanwhile the work of laying the tracks and building the structure which is to house the power plant on Glendale Avenue just south of Wilson, will go forward.

SCOTT ANDERSON PREACHES STRONG SERMON

After picturing the world in its pristine glory and describing the fall of man from his God-like state, Scott Anderson, in an address at the Chamber of Commerce hall last evening, "A Sick World," declared that the "Great Physician" will soon appear to heal the sick world, and that the resurrected and redeemed race shall yet walk the earth in newness of life.

"In the beginning man was a perfect happy being," said Mr. Anderson, "but Lucifer, master-quick of the universe, appeared on the scene, persuaded man that he was undernourished and prescribed for him a concoction of disobedience and doubt. The effect was immediate and serious. The sufferings of the poor sick world have been indescribable."

"Has the world had any doctors? Yes, Quack Lucifer has been retained as chief of staff throughout the long illness. He has been assisted by Drs. Paganism, Worldly Wisdom, Science, 'falsely so-called,' Clergyman, Profiteer and Politician. An undertaking establishment by the name of Sovietism and Company, is waiting for the corpse which it intends to lay away in the cemetery of Communism. But—the hour has struck, the Great Physician is about to be called. His remedy, the Messianic Kingdom, will restore the dying world to its former good health. The twenty billions of the race shall live again, and walk among the flowers of a world-wide Eden, and the world shall be filled with righteousness, life and peace forevermore."

DELIGHT IN LIFE OF FAITH SHOWN BY BROOKS

Growing out of the exposition of the first chapter of Paul's Epistle to the Thessalonians, Keith L. Brooks brought out the apostle's delight over the life of faith, the toil of love and the endurance of hope which he found in his Thessalonian converts, at the meeting of the Presbyterian Men's Bible Class yesterday. The faith that works, the love that labors, and the hope that endures, are the very essence of practical Christianity, he said. He spoke in part as follows:

"The work of faith referred to has reference to the whole practical life of the Christian life, all that faith affects—the conduct of life. While the apostle teaches complete justification before God by the initial act of faith in the Savior, he is no less insistent upon the necessity of right conduct as the issue of true faith in Christ. James says that 'faith without works is dead.' Paul is no less definite. If there is any true faith in Christ it will be manifested in conduct."

"The toil of love, referring to his convert's loving service to others, is still the sure outgrowth of the life of faith. In this persecuted church there was ample room for the love of brotherly love. The word 'others' is still the keyword of Christianity. Set is a blighting spirit. It is like the upas tree, in the atmosphere of which nothing beautiful can grow. I heard recently of how a new policeman, somewhat puffed up with his new authority, came across an old lady wearing a shawl. She was bending over and picking up something which she concealed in her apron. The officer thought that she was into some mischief and threatened her with arrest, bidding her show him what she was concealing. It proved to be bits of glass that she had picked up from the path lest the bare feet of children should be cut. No wonder the big 'cop's' heart was touched by the beauty of her labor of love, and that tears came to his eyes. Is this the mark of our lives? Do the poor, the sick, the needy, the bereaved, the unsaved, cry in vain about us? Surely the person who has the love of Christ abiding in him will have his Master's desire to minister to others."

"The climax of virtues which Paul saw in his Thessalonian converts was their endurance of hope. From the very first they had been tried by the fiercest persecution, yet in view of the hope held before them, that in God's time Christ Himself should return to the earth, they were able to endure under all these trials. The word for 'endurance' here implies active endurance, not a mere passive resignation. It speaks of the fortitude of a stout-hearted soldier, one who under all circumstances is able to bear up and steer right on. As we are the only who, in this time of weakening faith around us, insolent religion and contemptuous indifference to spiritual things, utterly lose heart? The apostle shows that it is the hope of our Lord's return that will keep one steady in such times. In this expectation lay the peculiar strength of the Thessalonian Christians."

The officers elected for the ensuing year are: President, Pierson Worrall Banning; vice president, Dr. Wesley Wilbur Beckett; second vice president, Henry Orson Wheeler; third vice president, Walter Kimple Tuller; secretary, Elmer Allan Hanger; assistant secretary, Joseph Brandon Bruner; treasurer, John Franklin Horton; assistant treasurer, Charles John Griffin; registrar, John Emerson Marble; chaplain, Rev. At the Presbyterian church, Sunday morning, Rev. W. E. Edmonds preached on "The Altar of Prayer," from the words, "Let my prayer be set before Thee as incense." (Ps. 141:2). A resume follows:

David had in mind the picture of the tabernacle. There, in the holy place, before the costly curtain in front of the most holy, stood the altar of incense, and when incense was burning upon it, the sweet fragrance filled all the place. The altar was small, made of fine acacia wood overlaid with gold, with a border of beaten gold as a crown about its top. Its symbolism is for our learning; it represents Christ's intercession for us, and also our intercession in the name of Christ—it is expression of prayer and communion with God. Christ—how much he prayed! And we who need so much, how little we pray!

The dual nature of Christ is shown in this altar, the wood for His humanity, overlaid with the fine gold for His divinity. And the believer, too—the gold of the new nature is laid over the wood.

This altar was nearest to the most holy place, to God. Prayer is the closest to God, and it stands highest in the believer's life. Prayer changes things, and it is the only thing that does.

Upon the corners of the altar were horns of gold pointing the four directions to each corner of Israel. The prayers of our Lord reach all directions for all His people. For the believer, every part of earth is His range. If you have only one horn on your altar you are not in line with God's will, and you can't look for His answer.

The altar had gold rings on its corners, to be lifted up by poles to carry, for it was to go along with the people wherever they moved. Are there any rings on your altar of incense, to take it along with you? If you leave it behind what are you going to do? This means the difference between conquest and defeat.

The fire upon this altar was never to go out. Has your fire gone out? Comes a crisis—"I had better get up my fire!" What did you let it go out for? You had no rings on your altar, you did not bring it along. That altar will take the lukewarmness out of your life in order, kitchen, or anywhere; it settles absolutely everything. You haven't begun to live without it. The odor of precious spices filled that whole place, a holy disinfectant; prayer keeps the atmosphere.

Another thing: There was genuine incense fire, and there could be a false. But God had set down exactly what it should be. You hear, "It's all the same, all alike; my life is fragrant with this, that, and the other." If it is in your own name, your own virtue, no; only God's way.

The incense must be crushed; how He was crushed! God enable us to bring our incense beaten very small.

The director was reduced to the state of a raving maniac. The star was new and ignorant of the codified procedure in the violent love scene being enacted. "All you got to do, Geraldine," roared the peevish director, "is to shove the hero away from you rough when he comes to kiss you. For the love of Moses! Ain't you ever tried to keep a fellow from kissing you?"

"Never," said Geraldine.

TRY THINKING HARDER

By H. ADDINGTON BRUCE

Author of "The Riddle of Personality," "Self-Development," Etc. (Copyright, 1923, by The Associated Newspapers)

You tell me you wish you could get on in the business world a little faster than you have been doing. You lament that the high hopes and bright dreams with which you began business life seem as far from realization as ever.

Perhaps you are over-impatient. A good many young people in business are. More likely, though, the trouble is that you are not taking your work seriously enough, are not devoting to it anything like the thought you ought to give it.

Certainly I should suspect this, in view of your further statement that other men who started in the same line of business about the time you did have made more headway. This of itself would suggest that they have done harder thinking than you.

When at work, do you really concentrate on your work? Do you ever think about it—really think about it—when away from it?

Your response that you have always understood that one should relax and completely forget one's work in hours of leisure is scarcely satisfactory. A certain amount of relaxation is necessary, that is true. But the really ambitious, the sincerely desirous of progressing, by no means regard leisure as wholly a time for relaxing and work-forgetting.

Nor do they find that to spend some of their leisure in thinking hard about their work is hurtful to them. Their experience, on the contrary, goes to show that, provided one does not wholly deny one's self recreation, the use of leisure as a thinking period is helpful in every way.

Recall, if you please, that sage observation uttered long ago by the greatest of American psychologists, William James:

"Our organism has stored up reserves of energy that are ordinarily not called upon, but that may be called upon; deeper and deeper strata of combustible material ready for use by any one who probes so deep. . . . Most of us continue living unnecessarily near the surface."

And apply for yourself the advice offered by another psychologist:

"Determine accurately by experiment the proper relation between periods of work and periods of rest in your own case, then increase your efficiency by maintaining this relation."

That is to say, besides making it a point to concentrate on your work during your working day, form the habit of thinking on business problems during part of your leisure. Gradually increase this leisure-thinking until you know that you are overdoing it.

Then let down a bit in order to determine your thinking-relaxing norm. When you have determined this, maintain it. Before long, I warrant, you will find that you are working to better purpose and with more satisfactory results than ever before.

More than this, it is quite possible that, as things now stand with you, your devotion to the principle of completely relaxing when free from work may in some degree have unfitted you for concentration on your work while engaged in it. At all events that is what happens to a good many workers, and perhaps it has happened to you.

So try the plan suggested. It may be the one thing necessary to shift you from the ranks of imminent failures to the choice company of eminent winners of success.

In Fleet street, London, there is a persistent rumor that the engagement of Viscountess Northcliffe to Sir Robert Hudson, chief agent of the Liberal party, will be announced soon after litigation over the publisher's will is ended. Sir Robert was an intimate friend of Lord Northcliffe, and it was reported that he expressed a dying wish that his widow should marry Sir Robert, in whose integrity, ability and business capacity he had implicit faith. Sir Robert is a widower, 58 years old, and has one daughter. He is chairman of the joint finance committee of the British Red Cross, and was knighted for his services with that organization during the war. Viscountess Northcliffe and Sir Robert are shown above.

AERONAUTICS ACT ENDORSED BY THE NATIONAL BODY

P. G. Johnson, of Seattle, Wash., vice-president of the National Aeronautic association and governor of its Ninth district in an interview today, stated that the Civil Aeronautics act of 1923, introduced into the house of representatives on January 8, by Hon. Samuel E. Winslow, chairman of the interstate and foreign committee, is one of the most constructive legislative measures placed before congress since the Wright Brothers gave to the world mechanical flight on December 17, 1903.

"This bill," continued Mr. Johnson, "provides for a bureau of civil aeronautics in the department of commerce, and is the first step made by our government to place flying safe and sane and to place it on a parity with other interstate transportation activities."

"The development of commercial aeronautics in this country has been held back by reason of the non-existence of laws regulating and fostering aeronautical enterprises. Non-regulation has been the cause, too, of practically all the fatalities in flying outside of the military and naval establishments."

"This civil aeronautics act," Mr. Johnson emphasized, "will establish and promote the aeronautical industry and commercial air navigation throughout this country, by providing for the authorization and the carrying out of the inspection and licensing of aircraft and pilots, establishing certification of aircraft routes and terminals, establishing rules of the air and air administration and co-ordinating the military, naval, postal and commercial activities of the country into a great cohesive enterprise, which will be of enormous economic benefit and one of the most important factors in the national defense."

Mr. Johnson brought out the fact that these private concerns operating aircraft, which most closely approximate the standards of the regulatory measures in the proposed act in connection with the conduct of their business, in the last two years have carried more than 600,000 passengers without a fatality. The fatalities in commercial flying have been due to itinerant and gypsy flyers, who, however, carried several hundred thousands of passengers and caused only one fatality in every 600,000 miles of flight; a record placing the safety of flying in the United States ahead of every other country in the world.

"It is also true," Mr. Johnson brought out, "that the total mileage flown in the United States has exceeded the combined mileage of all the countries in Europe. It will thus be seen that the use of aviation on a grand scale in the United States has really been waiting upon the enactment by congress of such legislation as that proposed by Congressman Winslow. Capital has been skeptical of aviation because it has been an 'outlaw' activity doing an interstate business without the aid of interstate laws. Hence line companies have either refused to write aeronautical insurance or have charged such tremendous premiums that insurance was out of the question."

In conclusion Mr. Johnson stated that the National Aeronautic association is squarely behind this constructive act and sees in its passage the removal of the last barrier preventing the complete development of aviation in the United States.

PENDROY IS ENROUTE HOME WITH NEW MERCHANDISE

E. C. Pendroy of Pendroy's Dry Goods store at Harvard and Brand boulevard, is expected to return to Glendale the latter part of the week from a two weeks' business trip to St. Louis and Chicago, where he has been arranging purchasing contracts for various lines of merchandising.

The popularity of Monday as bargain day has been recognized by this firm. Last Monday the special feature was a sale of house dresses and today long before the store opened at 8:30 o'clock there were large numbers of people waiting to avail themselves of the opportunity of purchasing sweaters and hats at a very small cost.

PURELY PERSONAL

Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Swanner of North Kenwood street and party of friends enjoyed a motor trip to Mojave on Sunday.

R. E. Tittle of Glendale is visiting at San Diego, stopping at the St. James hotel.

Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Lewis and son Dean of Santa Ana spent the week-end with Mr. and Mrs. C. J. Berry, 353 Myrtle street. The former is a nephew of Mrs. Berry, and they have recently moved to Santa Ana from Ohio.

Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Culver of 1134 San Rafael avenue have as their house-guest this week their niece, Miss Wilma Culver, of Beaumont.

Mr. and Mrs. Beem Hyden of Owensmouth were Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. Grant Williams of 139 1/2 South Adams street.

Blinkby suffered from insomnia and his friend told him a sure cure.

"Eat a couple of bananas and drink two or three glasses of milk before going to bed," said he, "and I'll warrant you'll be asleep within half an hour."

Blinkby did as his friend suggested and went to sleep soon after his retirement, but this is what he dreamed:

The friend came on the scene with his head under his arm and asked if Blinkby wanted to buy his feet. Blinkby was negotiating with him, when the dragon on which he was riding, slipped out of its skin and left him in mid-air.

While he was considering how he should get down, a bull with two heads peered over the edge of the wall and said he would haul Blinkby up if he would first climb up and risk a windlass for him.

So, as Blinkby was sliding down the mountainside, the conductor came in, and Blinkby asked him when the train would reach his station.

"We passed your station 200 years ago," the conductor said calmly, folding the train up and slipping it into his waistcoat pocket.

At this juncture Blinkby awoke and found he had been asleep almost ten minutes.

CAUSE, EFFECT AND STYLE

In his "Economics," Henry Clay says, "At first sight the business world offers a spectacle of confusion rather than order." But it appears that so significant an article as a shirtwaist is the result of the working of a gigantic and well-ordered industrial machine, which takes one through vast fields of endeavor, all closely co-related. The spectacle of confusion, in the analysis, becomes a spectacle of efficiency and concerted effort on a world-wide scale, an industrial mechanism, a wonder to behold.

Almost quite as fascinating as a study is the working of the feminine machine which evolves the thing we call style. To a considerable extent it is part of the economical scheme of things, but beyond this it is a psychological manifestation of the law of cause and effect.

Bobbed hair is said to have come into style because a Parisian modista, ill with influenza, had her hair cut short to save it from falling out. Other women who watched her for fashion hints immediately had their hair bobbed, and in time bobbed hair became the international style. Now it is regarded as a comfort.

During the war short skirts came into style. We were not asked to shorten the length of our skirts, but we took the request to economize in everything as a hint. The mill hands had gone to war; the manufacture of material for skirts was affected. Wherefore, we shortened our skirts. This, too, was patriotism.

But the cause and effect of style were the early Indians of Mexico. They lived in large pueblos, communal house made of clay (adobe), one pueblo sometimes housing a thousand persons.

are not always so easily traceable. There is always a cause for an economical derangement; the effect indicates it. In some instances, nevertheless, the law of cause and effect which governs the making of styles is absurd in its revelations.

For example, black is again popular in Paris because Siki, the Senegalese fighter who knocked out Georges Carpentier, is black. The cause clearly manifests itself in the effect, and yet it seems very strange that Parisian women on this account should wear black stockings and dresses for the first time in more than three years.

After the war, in an effort to brighten the sorrow-stricken France, Paris decreed that only gay colors should be worn. Now the gay colors are going because Battling Siki knocked out Monsieur Georges Carpentier.

Is an Advertising Investment Good Collateral?

Your money deposited in banks is loaned by bankers upon the security of merchandise whose value has been created and is maintained by advertising.

Is the created more substantial than its creator—the product than the tool?

More and more, bankers are recognizing the essential verity of this principle—that money can be loaned as safely upon a sound advertising investment as upon other collateral which advertising has developed and maintained.

THE ATTITUDE OF FRANCE

In advancing into German territory France has taken a position for which diplomacy in general has scant approval. At least so would appear. The fact is to be remembered, however, that diplomacy is the incarnation of selfishness. A neighboring power, frowning on the conduct of France, might be thinking of its own interests, and in no measure of those of the French. In the broad view that may be taken at this distance from the scene of action, it is quite possible to be unbiased, and such a view is bound to be colored by sympathy.

France has been harried and ravished in a manner no modern nation before had experienced. Millions of its young men perished in battle. Its fields and orchards and vineyards were laid waste, not as a necessity of war but wantonly, with intent to incapacitate it for all time from competition with its destroyer. Apparently Germany was conducting a campaign of extinction. That which it did not burn or break to bits, it carried away as loot. But in the end Germany was defeated. The world came to the rescue. It perceived that civilization was in the balance; the world saved civilization, and incidentally, France.

Germany signed a compact to make restitution. It may be that the requirements were hastily and harshly drawn. They were mild compared with the terms that a conquering Germany would have offered. Perhaps there were some provisions that Germany, striving its utmost, could not have met. But from the first Germany was obdurate, showing a disposition to ignore its solemn obligations. It pleaded poverty most dire, while out of its industries, individual Germans were achieving vast fortunes. It was believed not to have tried to observe the treaty. Certainly in the details that it could have fulfilled, it neglected the effort.

France looked forward to the time when Germany again might be a stupendous power, bent on vengeance. Had Germany shown good faith, given a sign of penitence, manifested any change of heart; any intent to abandon monstrous ambitions, there could have been imagined the restoration of amity, and a European prosperity in which all might share.

The French evidently could not see the wisdom of permitting a hostile giant to gather strength against the day of reprisal. They chose rather that the German wealth, instead of being devoted exclusively to the building up of a new machine of terror, should be diverted to healing the industrial wounds inflicted by the German armies. Diplomacy may denounce this course as rash, but it is a natural course. It is the course that any nation with sufficient confidence in its cause and its strength would have taken.

Germany was defeated, but France had been asked to bear all the burden of defeat, permitting the conquered to go unscathed. This was too much to ask. France has made its answer; a just answer, but whether or not discreet, is a secret for the coming years to reveal.

RIGHTS OF THE FLUNKER

When a student fails to come up to the mark in his classes, he is said to have flunked. This may cause his dismissal from the institution. His failure may have been due to causes easily removed. For example, he may have devoted himself too much to athletics. Divorced from his favorite pastime, scared at his failure in the classroom, he might develop into an excellent student.

The announcement comes from one university that no student who has flunked at another need apply. This seems to close the door to education somewhat arbitrarily. The very fact that such a student would seek entrance elsewhere might be taken as an indication of desire to make a better record. In order that he be classified, it would be necessary to subject him to examination. It would appear not unfair to give him standing in accord with his merit as established by such examination.

A student sometimes proves himself undesirable, a dawdler and a loafer, his influence on his fellows detrimental. When such a student flunks he does not take his place at a level with the other student, who flunks because he tried to do too much, or because his interest had been centered on subjects not a part of the curriculum. Many poor students—as determined by their class averages—nevertheless have been faithful and of good intent. It is not uncommon for such a student in post-college days, to excel his fellows in usefulness as a citizen. Moreover, the cast-off of one university, in a new environment, might develop into a star student, or at least an average one. Consequently it seems harsh to deny him the chance.

STANDING BY THE GOVERNMENT

Constitutional government is the only form that is needed in this country. Good citizenship has no toleration for "invisible" government, for mob rule, for the swaggering insolence of the ku klux rabble. The part of all good citizens is to stand against these lawless agencies.

Revelations concerning the operations of the ku klux in Louisiana are more than startling. They are ominous and fearful. They show a condition of social rottenness, of moral obloquy, of ferocious brutality, that as yet it is almost impossible for the normal mind to conceive of as existing. The evidence is being marshalled. It shows that in the desire to establish a regime utterly supplanting written law and all the machinery for enforcement, the proponents resorted not only to murder, but to torture of their victims by methods of unspeakable cruelty and horror. Nothing but a hideous miscarriage of justice could spare one of the active malefactors alive. The war against this particular group of an illegal order should be literally a war of extermination.

A sinister indication of the manner in which the ku klux poison has permeated the social fabric is seen in the fact that sworn officers of the public service have been led into co-operation with the marauders, bullies, assassins. But this is not the worst. Here and there, from apparently respectable source, comes a word of approval for the degenerate interlopers who deem themselves superior to all restraint, qualified to specify what their own conduct shall be, and what that of their neighbors must be, on penalty of death or scourging or exile. Recently ministers in Chicago passed resolutions condemnatory of excluding members of the ku klux from jury duty. By the mere fact of belonging, such members stand branded as unfit. Another bunch of ministers, these at the seat of the present trouble, publicly lauded one of the men who is believed to have been a leader among the malign spirits that have made a hissing and a byword of a section of an honorable state. If the situation calls for ministerial expression, surely this should be on behalf of decency.

In the little southern town a band of renegades is on trial, but more than this is on trial. Constitutional government is there, pitted against anarchy, order against chaos, approved social methods against those of oath-bound, defiant criminals.

Some people worry because they are unable to worry other people.

About two-thirds of the average woman's sympathy is curiosity.

RESPECT

By DR. FRANK CRANE

Our whole problem is a struggle for respect. The desire for respect is probably our deepest one. Most human actions, good and bad, can be explained as efforts to obtain respect or as desperate gestures caused by the loss of it.

It goes without saying that a man seeks political office, or success in business, or riches, or to see his name in the newspaper, and that a woman seeks a place in society and the honors of love because all these goods are one form or another of respect.

We are social beings. As our bodies are nourished by absorbing our material environment in the form of food and drink, so our spirits are nourished by eating the manna that grows in soul gardens. The name of that manna is respect.

We are as happy when we find it as a baby when he finds his bottle. We are as wretched when it is denied us as the famine stricken who have no bread.

Respect, indeed, is the bread of life, even as love is the water of life.

Respect is our deepest morality.

The surest way to make one a criminal is to break down his self-respect and make him believe that others do not respect him.

Almost every human wreck was wrecked by auto-suggestion. The drunkard, for instance, believes that he must drink. He has lost all esteem for his will.

The man of integrity is such because he has the very highest opinion of himself, not that he is egotistic, but that he respects and obeys his own judgment and criticism as royal subjects obey a king.

Stupid and childish-minded society has assumed that the way to deal with the criminal is to punish him, and almost all forms of human punishment consist in the breaking down of self-respect. The offender is grabbed by the policeman; he is beaten, manacled, and carried to prison in a patrol wagon as an animal is carried to the slaughter house; he is brow-beaten by the lawyer; he is condemned by the judge; he is taken to the penitentiary and subjected to every form of degradation.

By some idiotic process of reasoning we call this justice. It is not. It is petulant retaliation on the part of society.

It never did cure any man and it never will. Just the first glimmerings of common sense ought to teach us that the cause of crime, the thing that makes a man do a crime in the first place, is that he lost respect for himself and perhaps lost the respect of others, and that, therefore, the real cure for this condition would be to treat him in such a manner as to restore his respect for himself and assure him of the respect of others.

Justification means making a man just and making him cease to be unjust. And justification we are told, is by faith. But the thing we need to learn is that that faith which makes us just is not the faith we have in something above us and outside of us, whether that something be God or society or our friends, but the faith these persons have in us.

THE RIGHT WORD

By W. CURTIS NICHOLSON

QUERIES

To T. Dobbins, Repress, Cal.: Would be the right word in the following sentence: "Dear Mother and Father: When I left home I was determined you should not be disappointed in me." Would not be disappointed is correct. Would implies simple future in the second person; should implies determined control on the part of the speaker over those spoken to. You cannot control your parents' feelings but you can prophesy that you will so conduct yourself that they will not be disappointed in you. Furthermore, your own resolution was summoned up in the word determined.

E. R., Chicago, Ill.: The following is incorrect: "There is plenty room available." The following is correct: "There is plenty of room available."

You ask "whether the auxiliary should or would should be used with the verb like." Should and like work together harmoniously in the first person; as, I should like to do it. The reason that would and like should not be placed together in the first person is that both words mean wish or desire, which results in repetition. But would, in the second and third person, expresses simple future, while should, in these persons, symbolizes command. The following are therefore correct: I should like; we should like; you would like; he would like; she would like.

H. L. L., New York: You ask why, in the following excerpt from a newspaper, the first verb is plural, and the second verb singular: "About half of them are smoking cigarettes; the other half is smoking borrowed cigarettes." The second verb should also be are.

To A. W. Wright, Fanwood, N. J.: You ask whether whom is correct in the following: "If the man whom he had working on the job can be considered . . . Whom is the right word. Whom is the object of had; as, he had whom working (he had him working—this is a parallel construction).

AND HE NEVER HEARD OF COUE.

Songs of the Poets

The Missive—By Edmund Gosse (1849—)

I that tremble at your feet
Am a rose;
Nothing dewier or more sweet
Buds or blows;
He that plucked me, he that threw me,
Breathed in fire his whole soul through me.
How the cold air is infused
With the scent!
See, this satin leaf is bruised—

Bruised and bent,
Lift me, lift the wounded blossom,
Soothe it at your rosier bosom!
Frown not with averted eyes!
Joy's a flower
That is born a god, and dies
In an hour.
Take me, for the summer closes,
And your life is but a rose's.

EVER HEAR OF BELATED WILD OATS?

By ESTELLE LAWTON LINDSEY

Belated wild oats—the disease is becoming quite common nowadays. Who's responsible? Perhaps the psychoanalysts. Anyhow, let them take the blame since it won't hurt them.

Recently a man appearing in court to answer his wife's application for divorce excused his capers on the plea that he was the victim of "belated wild oats." This he had discovered by self analysis. The crop was overdue some years and so he felt moved to sow it industriously before it was too late.

There is nothing especially new in the sowing of "belated wild oats." It's the excuse that is new and unique. It must make a philanthropist husband feel terribly virtuous to realize that if only he had undivorced and unapproached. Odd as it may seem, he eventually did come back. Wife received him with a kiss and only a mild glitter in her off eye. He is now as happy as any other disillusioned male of my acquaintance.

Had she been less indulgent the old chap might now be married to an enterprising flapper who would have him on the rock pile for failing to pay alimony—and the neighbors would have a toothsome morsel of gossip.

Of course, such a privilege as was enjoyed by the special philanthropist under discussion can only come to men having wise and patient wives with tested endurance ratings; but psychoanalysis is a new science and we must develop women to meet its problems.

EASTERN POINT OF VIEW

UNACCOUNTABLE

[St. Albans Messenger]

The Messenger cannot understand how this man La Follette can attain to any manner or any degree of leadership, but apparently he is going to be a powerful factor in the new congress. It would seem that the man's war record would be enough to condemn him and that others would dislike to be found in his legislative company. He was against every preparedness move and wound up by voting against the recognition of a state of war with Germany. Sometimes it seems that it makes no difference what a man's past record has been, so short is the public's memory. If La Follette can actually dictate to the United States, and it may yet come to that, we will have fallen on unhappy days, indeed.

DODGING GERMANY

[New York Tribune]

The trouble with these Allied conferences is that they never face candidly the necessity of making Germany fulfill her treaty obligations. They wink at default instead of rebuking it. Germany asks for a moratorium. What guaranty does she offer that she will live up to the promises she makes to secure this concession? Does she suggest an extension of the Allied occupation as an indication of her good faith?

She does not. Yet such an extension seems only a natural corollary of the postponements and diminutions of penalties which Germany demands. What objection can be found to it by persons who believe that the Versailles treaty still means something and that modifications of it should include concessions made by Germany as well as concessions made to Germany? To say that military pressure must not be used to enforce the treaty is to give Germany a free hand to nullify it. For Germany will be unrepentant and defiant and will yield only to a show of power.

COMMENT ON DAY'S NEWS

By HENRY JAMES

There hardly is a community that does not have a Dickens club. Such an organization is an excellent thing. It tends to keep alive the memory of the great novelist in a day in some respects marked by decadence in letters.

Many modern writers get as far as possible from Dickens, who is the great master of them all. Some even boast their lack of knowledge of Dickens, and show by their work that they are telling the truth. These are not great writers, however. Bret Harte was one of the few Americans to have created stories that will live. Produced in comparatively recent years, some of them even already seem quaint in phrase and conception, but out of them shines the light of genius. Rudyard Kipling's short stories proclaim him king in his chosen field. Both Harte and Kipling freely have admitted their debt to Dickens.

As to the place that Dickens still holds, a good test would be as to the familiarity of any representative gathering of intelligent individuals, with certain Dickens characters. Many of these characters seem to be more vividly real than figures out of authentic history. From Old Scrooge to Pickwick; from Oliver Twist to Bill Sikes, with scores of others, they stand out, not as persons that never existed, but with the vividness of abiding reality.

Dickens has to a devotee a greater charm than exercised by the books of any other author. It is a pleasure to read one of his novels anew even after the reader is familiar with the detailed story, and the peculiarities of every character portrayed. That is the evidence of unequalled appeal.

There are many things about the business side of baseball that puzzle the outsider. The system of buying and selling players with as little formality as though they were so many cattle, and as little profit to themselves, always excites repugnance on the part of the observer.

Just now the major leagues are asserting the right to send a given number of players to the minors to be "farmed out." That is to say, the minors are to take care of these players, educate them, and pay them while educating them, and then on demand, send them back to the majors regardless of the decimation in their own ranks.

Perhaps this is all right, although the first impulse is to term it an exhibition of monstrous nerve.

The Los Angeles police have in custody a man to whom they say they have traced the theft of twenty-four cars, all of these of the higher priced makes. His living was due to an apparently respectable business of selling used machines. The estimate is that he was about $50,000 ahead of the game when interrupted. Now he is behind the bars, and anybody so situated is behind the game, whatever it is.

There are many honest men dealing in used cars. The other kind of dealer, whose stock in trade costs him nothing but the trouble of taking it, cannot be considered a fair competitor.

A man at Long Beach was overcome by noxious gas at the bottom of a tank. For thirty-five minutes he had seemed to be dead. Observers thought that rigor mortis had set in. The lung motor crew of the Long Beach fire department was called, and brought the victim back to life, with every prospect of complete recovery.

Science will not permit any one to believe that the day of miracles really is over.

The sardines canned at San Pedro this season will be sufficient to permit every resident of the United States to have four of the toothsome little fish. This is one indication of the magnitude of the fishing industry at the harbor.

Sardines get to market with all sorts of labels on the cans, according to label they might be the product of any one of a dozen ports. The fact is, regardless of the gaudy paper on the outside, many a consumer of sardines he thinks came from Maine or from overseas, is eating the catch of San Pedro fishermen.

The Hearst papers may be excused for having a brainstorm just now. Things in Europe are not going their way. They had preached that the manner in which Europe might conduct itself was no business of the United States. "Hands off!" was the editorial yell.

All this was when there seemed prospect that interference would in some manner be displeasing to Germany. The fear was that an effort might be made to coerce that power. The prospect, vague as it was, gave pain to the proprietor, and stimulated his hired men to horrified shrieks. Now the shoe is on the other foot.

France has undertaken to make Germany pay its debt; once this becomes the business of the United States, and of nation under the sun. It becomes a duty to interfere, to arrest mad onward career of France, to clap the instigators of outrage the lock-up.

All of which shows just how genuine has been the demand that entangling alliances be avoided, though Europe blow itself to smithereens and the heavens fall kerplunk.

Recently a woman was denied the divorce she had sought. She was so indignant about it that just outside the court room she slapped her unloved husband's face a resounding smack.

WATCHING THE PARADE

By JOHN PILGRIM

There is more trouble in the house next door. I know it, because I saw her crying when she thought herself unobserved, and he sat in a brown study on the 8:10 that morning, looking as though he had lost his last friend. I knew they had quarreled. They usually do.

So I've tried Old Mr. Coue's treatment on their ten year old. My theory is that the trouble in the house next door is that her manners are not what they should be. She is one of the best women in the world, a loyal wife, pretty, clever, all that sort of thing—but when her temper gets up she surely does rasp. She has an unfortunate facility for saying the right sort of thing in the wrong sort of way. Her advice is always good, but no man with a spine could take it because of the manner in which it is delivered. I caught the ten year old.

"I'll give you two dollars if you can keep a secret," I said. "Can you?"

"You get your pay at the end of a month," I said. "You get two dollars more if you promise me that every night when you go to bed and each morning when you get up you will say to yourself: 'Every day in every way I am becoming politer and politer.'"

That is not good English, no doubt, and the whole idea is an infringement on Dr. Coue. But my theory is that if the ten year old is as impressionable as Dr. Coue says all children are, he will become a model of politeness by the month's end. The trouble with his mother is that she did not learn how to give her advice in low tones when she was ten years old. No finer man ever lived than her husband, but he resents being called a fool. She feels deeply that anyone who does not agree with her—knowing, as she does, that her advice is good—must be a fool.

If the scheme works out, I'll let the ten-year-old tell the story. Maybe there will be a reflex action on Pa and Ma.

WORKER SUPREME IN YUCATAN, MEXICO

BY FRED K. G. NEUMEIER
United Press Staff Correspondent
MEXICO CITY, MEXICO, Jan. 15.—Yucatan is a closed shop.

It is a land where the laborer is in full power. No other country or state in the world, it is said, has labor laws such as are in this state of Mexico.

The laws provide that all workers have the right to unionize as a means of defense for private and common interests and to form "leagues of resistance" or other similar organizations.

Workers, under the law, have a right to demand part of the profits besides their wages. When a worker cannot work due to the fault of the employer, he must be paid wages for the time lost.

All employers must hand to the state treasury five percent of their net profits which is devoted to relieving distress in parts of the state where work is scarce.

When laborers are brought from other localities, they may demand to be returned to their homes and the employer must pay the expenses.

Where the work is situated out of villages or towns, the employer must provide commodious houses for the workers and when the workers leave their jobs for whatever motive they have a right to keep on living in the houses one more year without paying rent.

Schools and theatres must be established for the workers.

When a person is discharged without cause or for belonging to a league of resistance, or for having taken part in a strike, his employment at the election of the worker, either comply with the contract or give him three months' wages.

When a woman worker is fired, including a domestic, she must be given three months' wages, even if she is ousted with cause.

The constitution of Mexico provides that eight hours shall constitute a working day. In Yucatan, however, the socialists have gotten around this provision with a law that provides, "the duration of the maximum day shall be eight hours but ordinarily it must not be more than six and the unionized have the right to demand through their leagues of resistance or other organizations even less hours of work, but with the same rate of wages."

The law provides that only a half day's work shall be done on Saturday, but that payment shall be made for a full day's work. All overtime must be paid for at a double rate.

Liberal child labor laws are provided and mothers are given special attention.

Article 77 of the labor laws provides that when the feeding of a baby is incompatible with the work of a mother, she has the right to leave the work without incurring any responsibilities and must be paid three months' wages.

Article 79 of the new law provides that expectant mothers must take rest two months before and two months after the child birth and that the mother shall receive full salary and her position kept open for her. Mothers are entitled under the law to two hours daily for the feeding of the children.

Whenever an employer uses violence or menace to stop a strike, he is imprisoned for a period of fifteen days, provided that he does not commit at the same time offenses which are punishable under the penal code.

The laws provide that when workers go on a strike their places cannot be taken, nor can business

Petty Jealousies Figure in Benton Case

By HENRY L. FARRELL
United Press Sports Editor

NEW YORK, Jan. 15.—Rube Benton is not good enough to pitch ball in the American League, by an official mandate of Ban Johnson.

Benton isn't wanted in the National League because John Heydler, president of the league, and Barney Dreyfuss, owner of the Pittsburgh Pirates, think he isn't good enough.

But Benton is good enough for the American Association, and he probably will return to St. Paul, if organized baseball will not let him play with the Cincinnati Reds.

This is one of the inconsistencies that makes a joke out of organized baseball—that exposes its mercenary motives and its petty little jealousies.

The National and the American Leagues belong to organized baseball, and so does the American Association.

Benton may not be able to play in the major leagues, but he no doubt will be allowed to continue in the minors.

What does organized baseball mean?

If Benton has done anything that makes him undesirable as a major league ball player, he should be thrown out of baseball. If he is innocent of the charges and whispers made against him, his accusers ought to be thrown out of the game.

Ban Johnson bases his objection to the admission of Benton to the American League on the story that Benton knew the 1919 series had been fixed and that he bet and won $1500 on it.

Benton admits winning $1500, but comes back with the answer that he was a National League player and that he bet on the National League team, as many other players did.

Heydler's objection to Benton is more of a secret. It probably has something to do with the row between the former Giant pitcher and Charley Herzog, in which each accused the other of making overtures to throw a game. Heydler unofficially whitewashed Benton of those charges, by allowing him to remain in the league while Herzog went elsewhere.

The objections of Barney Dreyfuss to the return of Benton are the result of both mercenary and personal motives. Since Garry Herrmann, as chairman of the old national commission, handed down the decision that George Sisler was the property of the St. Louis Browns, instead of the Pittsburgh Pirates, Dreyfuss has been after the Red president, and now he finds himself in the position of continuing an agitation that may deprive his enemy of a fine pitcher.

Barney knows also that one good experienced pitcher in the Red staff is the margin by which Herrmann may get another National League pennant, and give Pittsburgh another swallow of disappointment.

The St. Paul club, as well as Benton, suffers by the underground campaign which is used so much in big league baseball. St. Paul bought Benton in good faith, and used him in winning a pennant last season. Benton became marketable at a good price, and then the dirt-throwing started.

The club owners who couldn't get him were like the well known dog in the feed box.

Unless Benton is cleared, St. Paul will have to dispose of him or work a pitcher under a cloud.

MILWAUKEE MEET OF BOWLERS TO BREAK RECORDS

BY A. L. LANGTRY

American Bowling Congress
MILWAUKEE, Wis., Jan. 15.—The twenty-third International Tournament of the American Bowling Congress, to be held in this city from March 10 to April 8, promises to be the greatest athletic carnival of the decade. There is an entry list of over ten thousand participants from every section of the country and a huge prize list that will top $65,000 and probably run as high as $70,000.

Conditions this year are ideal, with business improving and the bowling spirit strong for Milwaukee.

The last International tournament held in Milwaukee was at the old Exposition building, which drew an entry of 218 teams, in 1905, and eighteen years later the tournament will be held at the site of the old Exposition building, the latter being destroyed by fire only three months after the 1905 tournament of the congress.

The interest in the tournament is widespread, as reservations have been made from San Antonio to Winnipeg, and from Jacksonville, New Haven and New York on the east to Los Angeles and San Francisco on the west. Representation from this huge territory means a great boom for the game in the middle west, as the big tournament of the congress is looked upon annually as a pace setter for the game, and a big representative tournament means that the game is growing.

All of the champions of 1922 have entered with their teams, including the Lincoln Life team of Port Wayne, Ind., composed of some of the greatest of younger bowlers in the country, who are not only tournament team bowlers, but all good individual match game bowlers.

The two Spinella brothers of New York who won the two-men championship, have entered on Budd's Stars of that city, and Willie Lundgren of Chicago, the individual champion, has filed his entry through the Chicago boosting committee headed by Dave Luby.

Spokane of Chicago, it is estimated that its entry will reach about 300 five-men teams, 700 doubles and 1500 individuals, which, together with the Wisconsin entry of 500 teams, would make a tournament of record size, alone.

But this is not all, as every bowling commonwealth in the country has its teams entered, and many teams will represent Canada this year, coming from Montreal to Winnipeg, so it will be a real international affair.

Although the entries do not close until February 9, there has been filed with secretary A. L. Langtry, at 175 Second street, Milwaukee, Wis., reservations for over 800 teams, and everyone of them is from territory outside of the state of Wisconsin, so all can see the interest in the game is widespread.

Champions that are and champions that have been will be entered, and the stars of the match game world including Lindsey, Smith, Blouin, Wolf, Mitchell, and many others will have to swine the mineraline in competition with many old veterans who have been former champions for years. So great competition is looked for and record scores predicted when the bowling horde start to work at Milwaukee in March.

A man who had been arrested on suspicion was appearing before the magistrate.

"What were you doing when the policeman came?" asked the magistrate.

"Waiting, sir," replied the prisoner.

"What were you waiting for?"

"For money."

"Who was to give you money?"

"The man I had been waiting for."

"What did he owe it to you for?"

"For waiting."

"Enough of this tomfoolery!" snapped the magistrate, who by now was very angry. "What do you do for a living?"

"I'm a waiter, sir," replied the innocent man.

If a man will stand for being petted, his wife has no use for any other pet animal.

'CHRIST'S IDEALS' SERMON TOPIC OF REV. COLE

New Officers of Y. P. S. C.
E. Dedicated at Evening Service

"Christ's Ideals for the Church" was the subject of Rev. Clifford A. Cole's sermon at Central Christian church Sunday morning, a study of the modern church as compared with that for which Christ gave His life and which He outlined to His followers. Without entering into a criticism of the church of today the speaker told his hearers that that body should be in the present age if Christ's ideals are attained.

The church is a hospital, was declared, for it accepts all who seek admission and strives to build them up. There is no blackballing of candidates seeking admission. The sole requirement is a positive belief in Jesus as the Savior of the world. In the first recorded sentence spoken by the Master after He began his life work He used the word "righteousness" as a keynote. And in His last recorded public address he used the same word. The church today should talk righteousness constantly and live righteousness. The world is better today than it was 100 years ago, 50 years ago, 10 years ago, and it will grow better constantly for we have the Master's positive statement that "The gates of hell shall not prevail against it."

For two generations the Bible has been banished from the public schools and we are reaping the results of it. We rightly spend millions of dollars every year for secular education of the young people but only a fraction of these sums for religious education. The church must change this.

The only mark of greatness is service, for did not Jesus say "He that would be greatest among you let him be the servant of all." The church has only one job in this world, and that is the redemption of man. The church of today, to measure up to Christ's ideals and requirements, must be spiritual, democratic, united, humanitarian, missionary. The member who says

A PARTING

"Don't go, Bill, don't go!
I know it must seem slow
Here on th' farm fer a boy like you;
I know the many a chore to do;
Not much in th' way o' company,
'Cept what ye git from Ma an' me.
An' it's temptin' to think o' th' world so wide,
An' all o' th' pleasures o' life outside
Our quiet little home life here;
But, Bill, it'll seem so hard an' queer
Fer Ma an' me, as we allus do,
Not to sit an' feel so proud o' you
When we see you 'roun'. I know it's slow
But, Bill, I wish you wouldn't go!

"Don't go, Bill, don't go!
Ma's tears jes' flow an' flow
When she's packin' up yer trunk—an' I—
Well, Bill, I ain't much on th' cry.
But th' old man's heart is heavy, Bill.
The's an' achin' there that won't be still.
Jim's gone, an' though a year's gone by,
It don't seem right he had to die;
Then Jack left home, an' Lou is wed,
Fer we haven't heard a word from him.
Bill! Bill! Our flock has grown so slim,
Ye're all we've got now, Bill, an' so
I jes' can't bear to let ye go!

"What d'ye say, Bill? Ye won't go!
Boy, boy, ye'll never know
What a load ye've raised fr'm th' ol' folks' heart,
Fer we couldn't bear to see ye start.
Come, here, Bill, let me hug ye once;
Well, drat me fer a sneakin' dunce,
If my blame ol' eyes ain't filled with tears,
When I feel like whoopin' up with cheers.
An' Bill, let's go tell Mother so,
That her boy says he ain't goin' to go."

At the evening service the

KAFATERIA SHOE STORE STAGES BIG CLEARANCE

Through the purchase of an enormous amount of merchandise by Mr. Glass, owner of the twelve Kafateria Shoe Stores in Southern California, while he was on a buying trip in the east recently, the local Kafateria Shoe Store, 126 North Brand boulevard, of which Mr. Cushman is the genial manager, has put on a sale that is attracting many people from miles around. Prices are as low as $1 for shoes, a full announcement of which appeared in Saturday's Glendale Daily Press.

"Business is going right ahead with us," said Mr. Cushman, the manager. "We are increasing every week, and we have had some exceptionally large days since placing this big purchase of footwear on the market. We sell nothing over $4.85 in shoes, and many people have told us that they have paid as much as $11 and $12 for the same shoes elsewhere. All we ask is for shoe buyers to come in and see us, and look over our stock."

Mr. Cushman is a live wire and is taking an active interest in everything that will place Glendale in the forefront.

then called to the front and dedicated to their tasks by the pastor.
The sermon topic was "Getting There and Staying There." The lesson of discourse was for young people, especially, dealing with the life and work of Josiah, the righteous king of Judah, who, though preceded on the throne by a wicked father and a much wicked grandfather, Manasseh, yet began at 8 years of age to serve the Lord with his whole heart. He redeemed the people and purged the land from its iniquity and turned to the right, not to the left but served the Lord continually." The young people were exhorted to heed the wise man's command "Remember now thy creator in the days of thy youth, when the evil days come not," and then to continue in His work as long as life shall last.

A beautiful bass solo by C. Clifford Riggs and a duet by Mrs.
Floyd Mercer and Mrs. R. P. Jodon were the special musical numbers.
